Uncle Sam now giving $400 credits for kids, still tight on home business

The news for 1998 tax returns is something every parent will be glad to hear.

Now, for each qualifying child under 17, you may be able to subtract up to $400 from your 1998 federal income tax, unless your income exceeds specified levels.

For your 1999 federal tax return, the Child Tax Credit will go up to $500 per qualifying child.

The Child Tax Credit is an important benefit of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, passed by Congress and signed into law by the president.

You've had exemptions and deductions before, but this is different — a full credit that cuts your tax by up to $400 per child.

This is a credit that puts the extra money right in your hands.

Who qualifies for the $400 credit? Your dependent child or descendant, stepchild or foster child for whom you can claim a dependency exemption. The child must be under 17 as of Dec. 31, 1998, must be a U.S. citizen or resident, and must have a Social Security or other I.D. number, entered on your return.

One child can mean up to a $400 credit. Two children, up to $800.

Do you have three or more children? If so, you may be allowed a total Child Tax Credit that, in some circumstances, can exceed your regular tax liability - which is not ordinarily the case. You may even get a refund of this additional credit, depending on the Social Security and self-employment taxes you pay and any earned income credit you receive.

(Note: For one or two children, your total tax credit cannot exceed your regular tax liability.)

Your total Child Tax Credit is reduced by $50 for each $1,000 that your Modified Adjusted Gross Income exceeds $110,000 for joint filers, $75,000 if unmarried, or $55,000 if married filing separately.

For your 1999 tax return, the Child Tax Credit will go up to $500 per qualifying child.

To claim the credit, figure your credit using the worksheet in Form 1040 or 1040A instructions. Then enter it on Line 43 of your Form 1040, or Line 28 on Form 1040A.

For three or more children, attach Form 8812. Taxpayers are allowed to claim both the dependency exemption and the Child Tax Credit.

The IRS suggests that parents start enjoying Taxpayer Relief right away. If you expect a bigger refund on your 1998 tax as a result of this new Child Tax Credit, you can take home more money each payday by asking your employer to lower the amount withheld from your pay. Use Form W-4, available from your employer or the IRS.

However, to avoid a penalty for underpayment, your withholding and estimated tax payments for the 1998 return must total either 100 percent of your 1997 tax liability or at least 90 percent of the 1998 liability.

But if the amount you pay with your return is less than $1,000, there is no penalty. If you think you're getting a refund from the IRS, the Child Tax Credit can increase it by $400 a child.

Business Use of the Home. Whether you are an employee or self-employed, you may be able to deduct certain expenses by using a part of your home for business purposes.

To deduct business-use-of-the-home expenses, a part of your home must be used regularly and exclusively:

1. As the principal place of business for any trade or business in which you engage,

2. As the place where you meet and deal with your patients, clients, or customers in the normal course of your trade or business; or

3. In connection with your trade or business, if you use a separate structure that is not attached to your home.

If you use both your home and other locations regularly in the same trade or business, you must determine which location is your principal place of business.

The two primary factors used to determine your principal place of business are the amount of time spent in each business location and the relative importance of the activities performed at each location.

After 1998, where you perform substantial administrative and management activities will also be considered in determining whether your home is your principal place of business.

In general, because of the exclusive use rule, you cannot deduct business expenses for any part of your home that you use for both personal and business purposes.

For example, if you are an attorney and use the den of your home to write legal briefs and also for personal purposes, you may not deduct any business-use-of-your-home expenses. The only exceptions to the exclusive business-use rule are for qualified daycare providers and for persons storing inventory or product samples used in their business.

If you are an employee, additional rules apply. Even if you meet the exclusive and regular use tests, you cannot take any deductions for the business use of your home unless this use of your home is for the convenience of your employer and your employer does not pay you rent for the portion of your home that you use in providing services as an employee.

Some of the deductible business use of the home expenses may include the business portion of real estate taxes, mortgage interest, casualty losses, rent, utilities, insurance, depreciation, painting and repairs.

You may not deduct expenses for lawn care or for painting a room not used for business.

The amount you can deduct depends on the percentage of your home used for business. To figure this percentage, divide the number of square feet used for business by the total square feet in your home. Or, if the rooms are approximately the same size, divide the number of rooms used for business by the total number of rooms in your home.

You figure the business portion of your expenses by applying this percentage to the total of each expense.

Qualified day care providers must reduce their percentage to take into account the time available for personal use of any area not used exclusively for business.

If your gross income from the business use of your home is less than your total business expenses, your deduction for certain expenses for the business use of your home is limited.

However, those business expenses that are not deducted because of the limit can be carried forward as part of next year's business-use-of-the-home expenses.

Publication 587, Business Use of Your Home, has detailed information on the business use of your home rules. If you are an employee, use the worksheet in Publication 587 to figure your deductions. As an employee, you must itemize deductions on Schedule A (Form 1040) to claim expenses for the business use of your home.

If you are self-employed, use Form 8829 to figure your business use of the home deductions and report those deductions on Schedule C, (Form 1040). Publications can be downloaded from www.irs.gov or ordered by calling 1-800-829-3676.

Volunteers sought to help wildlife babies

Project Wildlife is gearing up for San Diego County's annual baby season. Over the next year, Project Wildlife will receive over 9,000 baby birds and mammals.

Volunteers are needed to care for injured and orphaned wildlife four hours per week at the Project Wildlife Care Facility in San Diego.

Volunteers are also needed to care for baby birds and mammals in their own homes. Rescue/transport volunteers and telephone volunteers are in demand too.

"The wildlife baby season is an extremely busy period of time," said Lyn Lacye, spokesperson for Project Wildlife. "Each year with tree trimming being undertaken at the wrong time of the year and with encroaching development, more and more of our feathered and furry friends get into trouble and need human help."

There are a number of ways to help in this massive effort to save San Diego's native wildlife. Individuals who are home during the day will be trained in the care and feeding of baby songbirds and mammals.

Dependable people are needed to volunteer four hours a week at the Project Wildlife Care Facility, which is open seven days a week, twelve hours per day.

In some areas, the Project Wildlife phone number can be call forwarded to a volunteer's home for four hours each week, and calls can be directed to the volunteer staff.

"If you do find a baby bird or mammal, be sure it really is orphaned before you rescue it," cautioned Lacye. "Many species leave their young while out searching for food. Be sure the parents are not returning to feed."

A baby bird that has fallen from the nest can be put back; the parents will continue to feed it. If you can't reach the nest, put the bird in a plastic bowl lined with tissue or paper towels as close as possible to the original site. Then watch carefully for 90 minutes to see if the parent birds feed the baby. The parents will usually find it.

When rescue becomes necessary, the bird or animal should be handled as little as possible. Often these otherwise healthy creatures die of stress. Keep the animal or bird warm, dark and quiet, and call Project Wildlife.

Until you reach a volunteer, do not feed the wildlife. Baby birds and mammals can easily inhale food into their lungs and die, and incorrect diet can cause irreparable damage.

New volunteers will receive specialized training in their selected caregiving, and supplies will be provided. For more volunteer information, call 579-5083.
